Learning objectives

A successful clinical trial is supported by a well trained and knowledgeable study team working hand in hand. Study coordinator or research nurse plays an important role in the study team, being the left and right hand of the principal investigator. This workshop aims to prepare and build up individual capabilities in new technology for a research position at any phase of Good Clinical Practice (GCP) trials with minimal supervision after the completion of the training.

Who should attend

If your work involves 'head-to-toe' clinical trial management, this is a workshop that you can't miss. Study coordinators and research nurses planning or currently engaged in clinical trials, clinicians who wish to know better about the operation of clinical trial will draw direct and immediate benefits.

Faculty

Speakers comprise experts whom have valuable experiences from clinical research and pharmaceutical industries. Take this opportunity to learn from people with real life testimony on how to conduct quality trials. A mixture of lectures and hands-on application in small breakout groups maximize learning benefits.
